

Wien Air Alaska

Wien Alaska Airways was a family owned airline established in 1927 operating within the state of Alaska. The name was changed several times until Wien Air Alaska was adopted in 1974. After airline deregulation in 1978, Wien began expanding into the lower 48 states and introduced service to Albuquerque on March 2, 1984 with a single flight to Oakland, California, continuing on to Portland, Seattle, Anchorage, and ending in Kodiak, Alaska using a Boeing 737-200 aircraft. A second flight was added a month later to Denver, Seattle, and Anchorage using a 727-200 but ended the same month. Wien's service to Albuquerque was very brief as the first flight was then discontinued on May 31, 1984, only three months after it had started. The airline had shut down by November of that year.

Wien Air Alaska Boeing 737-200.

Wien Air Alaska route map from April, 1984.